NATIONAL GUARD.

The National Guard are protectors of all law-abiding citizens. They are organized under wise provisions made by the Legislature for the purpose of assisting the civil authorities in maintaining the supremacy of the law, and protecting the lives and property of the citizens of the State.

They are called upon only when the civil authorities fail in the preservation of the peace. They have rendered arduous service, self-sacrificing labors, in many States. Without the Guard, law and order could scarcely be maintained. The day has gone by when any person, with proper instincts, thinks of ridiculing them as "amateur soldiers."

The National Guard has a double duty to perform: First, As a citizen in a strict observance of the law of the land, and by every moral force in his power upholding the supremacy of the same. Second, When the constituted authorities have failed in the preservation of peace, and the protection of life and property with the civil power, then, as a soldier of the State, he is adding his physical power to the maintenance of the laws which as a citizen he has endeavored to support. Every good citizen is bound to acknowledge his obligation to a well disciplined body of National Guardsmen whose prestige and moral force overawe law breakers. The recent labor troubles, which have agitated the public mind to so great a degree, have demonstrated that a military force is essential to the preservation of society from disintegration.

In several of our great States of the Union, the law has been compelled to call in the assistance of the State troops for the purpose of quelling anarchistic insurrections.

Even the right to labor—the inalienable right of every human being—has been assailed by violence, and the attacks have been so fierce that they were too strong for the civil authorities alone.

Arizona has other demands for an organized military force. We have in our midst several semi-civilized Indian tribes; the southern border of the Territory rests on a foreign country; the national government is drawing its regular forces out of the Territory, which will leave the isolated settlements at the mercy of renegade Indians. The Guard would be of great service to take the place of the regular army forces in garrisoning the forts of the Territory should the necessity arise calling the regular forces temporarily out of the Territory. This came very nearly being the condition of affairs during the late labor strikes.

With these facts staring us in the face it behooves every good law-abiding citizen of the Territory to encourage the young men in their endeavors to organize and build up the National Guard of the Territory.

THE OFFICERS OF THE LINE.

To command a company of the National Guard requires quite as much executive and military qualification as to command a company in the regular army.

In the National Guard the enlisted man may be one of the leading citizens of his locality, and his social status equal to that of his commanding officer. In the regular army there is no social relationship, either in or out of ranks, and but little, if any, social sympathy exists between the officers and men. So that an officer who can command the respect and confidence of his neighbor in citizen life, when in the uniform of the soldier must be made of superior stuff.

Without the spirit to govern in the right direction, the organized force may become a demoralized mass, quite as dangerous to the peace of the State as is the organized mob.

Without power to command, so as to bring the latent courage and spirit of the soldier into subordination when he is called upon to face danger, an officer should be relieved. A commission does not make an officer; nor a uniform, with the most complete equipments, a soldier. Spirit, courage, discipline, are the great requisites for an efficient soldiery.

The company commander has to submit to many discouragements owing to the frequent changes in membership. Despite his efforts to retain the services of trusty, disciplined men, the work of recruiting is ever with us, and the personnel of an average company changes about 40 per cent each year. Still there is some comfort in this, considering the number of young men who have shouldered a rifle in the service of our National Guard since it was organized. True, a portion of their military knowledge will become obsolete, but the valuable part of it all they still retain—the sound patriotic principle, which makes the ground work of a true soldier.

UNIFORMS.

The uniform of the United States Army has, under the provisions of the military code, been adopted for the National Guard. Up to date the fatigue uniform is all that has been furnished them, and for service, utility and simplicity I do not think it can be improved upon. Nothing can be neater than the blue fatigue uniform of our army, with no other ornaments or decorations than the medals the soldier may be entitled to wear. Nor can I conceive any dress more appropriate for a soldier in a republican form of government.

It is to be hoped that the full dress uniform of the regular army will not be taken up by the National Guard of Arizona. It is too expensive for the purse of the officers, and would soon exhaust the allowance made us by the national government in useless dress for the men, thereby depriving us for a long time of clothing and equipments absolutely necessary for the comfort and efficiency of the Guard.

The American citizen does not take kindly to much tinsel, fuss and feathers, and the less of these we wear the greater respect he will have for us.

But one company is supplied with overcoats, and under the present apportionment of the national government's appropriation it will take several years to equip all of the Guard with overcoats. As to the other portion of the uniform the men are fairly well provided for

MILITARY SUPPLIES.

Up to the present date the national government has issued to the Territory of Arizona, since the organization of the National Guard (four years), arms, ammunition, clothing and equipments to the money value of about $12,000, which are now in the possession of the Guard, and for which the company commanders are responsible to the Territory (under bonds), and for which you are responsible to the national government as Governor of the Territory. This, of course, is the total of all army supplies in the Territory, the Territorial Government never having made any appropriation for the maintenance of its National Guard except $30 a month for each company for armory rent.

Under this head I will state for the information of all concerned, that the commissioned officer of the Guard is not furnished with anything, either by the national or Territorial Governments. He is required to furnish his own uniform, arms, equipments and horses, when the latter is necessary.

The supplies that are furnished, mentioned above, are for the equipment of the rank and file, and cost the Territorial Government nothing, except, as stated before, the armory rental. This is made necessary in order to properly care for and preserve said property.

THE MILITARY CODE.

I quote the following extract from my annual report for 1893:

"The military code adopted by the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly is inactive.

"Sec. 5 of Article VII, provides that the Adjutant General shall be ex-officio Commissary General and that he shall provide such subsistence for the National Guard as may be ordered by the Commander in Chief. That is all right so far as it goes.

"There are no provisions in this Act to pay for any subsistence that might be required, consequently it will be impossible to move troops or put them into camp.

"Again, Act No. 90, of the Seventeenth Legislative Assembly, supplemental to and amendatory of Act No. 74 of the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly, provides that the National Guard shall receive the same pay and subsistence received by the United States Army, when called into active service. This is again a dead letter—no provision having been made under which money can be drawn to pay the Guard should they be called out.

"It is unjust to expect the members of the National Guard to give up their time and money in the service of the people of the Territory contingent upon the action of some future Territorial Legislature to reimburse them."

INSPECTION.

At my request Major Augustus H. Bainbridge, of the U. S. Army, was detailed by the Adjutant General of the U. S. Army to inspect the National Guard, but upon receiving the order making the detail I discovered that the Territory was expected to assume the expenses of said inspector after he had reported to the Governor of the Territory. As this department has no means available for such duty, I was of necessity compelled to decline the services of Major Bainbridge, much to my regret. Feeling the extreme necessity of having the companies inspected, I detailed Major R. Allyn Lewis, commanding Second Battalion of the Guard, as Acting Inspector General of the Territory. This duty the Major has performed most thoroughly, having visited and inspected every company in the Territory, except one. This was done at his own expense. The Major has, by close application and study, perfected himself in this particular department, as his carefully prepared report attached indicates, and to which I would call your attention.

This was corrected by Act No. 90 of the 18th Legislative Assembly

SMALL ARMS PRACTICE.

That commendable progress has been made in this department is evidenced by the report (herein attached) of Major H. F. Robinson, Inspector of Small Arms Practice, to which attention is especially invited. The Major is untiring in his work to advance the standard of target practice in his department. The importance of his efforts cannot be over-rated.

FIRST REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

Colonel John H. Martin, commanding the First Regiment of Infantry, has been connected with the National Guard since its incipency, and the present efficiency of the Guard is due in a great measure to the untiring efforts of the Colonel. He has devoted a great portion of his time and private means to the advancement of the Guard.

The routine official work of the Regimental Headquarters is carefully and promptly executed.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

The efficiency of this important branch of the service has been greatly increased through the earnest efforts of Colonel Scott Helm, Surgeon General, who has enlisted a hospital corps, and who are now undergoing a systematic course of instruction. Your attention is particularly called to the report attached.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

In closing this report I desire to recommend that the present Infantry Regiment be strengthened to twelve companies.

That three companies of cavalry at least, and one light battery of artillery be added to the National Guard. This will give our young men an opportunity to educate themselves in three different branches of the military service.

That the apportionment of the appropriation made by the national government for States and Territories for the purpose of providing arms and clothing for the National Guard, be increased, so far as Arizona Territory is concerned, from two thousand to four thousand dollars annually. At four thousand dollars a year it will take several years to equip the Guard properly for active service.

I would also strongly recommend that the company allowance of thirty dollars per month for company expenses and armory rental be increased to at least fifty dollars per month. This is made absolutely necessary from the fact that the Territory has a large amount of valuable arms and ammunition, which should be kept in a perfectly secure place, as against any danger of their falling in the hands of any dangerous element, and for their proper preservation.

As there is a strong, concerted movement throughout the United States to introduce the military tactics in the higher grades of our public schools, I would strongly recommend that our coming Legislature enact a law making the military sciences one of the studies of the public schools of our Territory.

This can be done with little, if any, expense to the Territory, as we have several thousand standard of arms within our Territory (of the old pattern) not in use by the Guard, which can be utilized by the different educational institutions for drill purposes. And I have no doubt that an old soldier could be found in every settlement who would willingly give a portion of his time to instruct our young men.

In conclusion, I wish to express my grateful acknowledgments, first to your excellency for the uniform kindness and consideration which, in the manifold duties that surround you, you have always extended to me personally and the National Guard generally

Very Respectfully,

ED SCHWARTZ,

Adjutant General.

Acting Inspector General

FOR THE YEAR ENDING 1894.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND BATTALION,
FIRST INFANTRY REGIMENT, N. G. A.,
PHOENIX, ARIZONA, December 31, 1894. }

*To Colonel Ed Schwartz,
Adjutant General N. G. A.*

SIR:

In accordance with General Orders No. 3, current series, Headquarters N. G. A. A. G. O., dated April 24th, 1894, detailing me as Acting Inspector General, I have the honor to report that I have inspected Regimental Headquarters, Headquarters First and Third Battalions, the Regimental Band, and all the companies of the Guard, with the exception of Company K.

The inspection of Company I was made at Flagstaff on the 1st September, and it was my intention to have proceeded from there to St. Johns to inspect K, but heavy rains had fallen during the month of August and I was informed that the roads were well nigh impassable, so decided not to attempt it at that time. Since then I have not had an opportunity to visit the station of this company. I submit below my report of the condition of the Guard, with such remarks and recommendations as seem to me would tend to increase the efficiency of the service.

Regimental Headquarters and the Band were inspected on the 7th of June, also Headquarters Third Battalion. The records at both Headquarters were well and carefully kept. The Guard certainly deserves to be congratulated upon having a Regimental commander who is able and willing to devote so much of his time and attention to its interest as does Colonel Martin.

The clothing and instruments of the Regimental Band were in excellent condition; their military appearance, instruction and discipline good. As to their ability as musicians, I had the pleasure of attending an open air concert given by them, which was thoroughly enjoyed by myself. The leader and members deserve great credit for the standard of proficiency attained by the Band. They are certainly a credit to the Regiment.

Headquarters First Battalion were inspected on the 1st September. This Battalion was only reorganized on the 24th April, and there were practically no records, nor has the Battalion commander any books. He should supply himself at the first opportunity with "Letters Received," "Letters Sent" and "Order Books," with necessary indexes.

Company A, Second Battalion, station Globe, was inspected on the 13th May. Present at inspection, two officers and 28 enlisted men; absent, with leave, one officer and four enlisted men; sick, two enlisted men; three enlisted men at work in mines and excused from attendance; total strength of company, 40. Condition of clothing, arms and accoutrements, excellent; the discipline, military appearance and proficiency in the school of the company, in close and open order, was all that could be desired. The company mounted guard in good form, and then went through the extended order drill as in a company on the offensive, using ball cartridge, and having as an objective three B targets. The firing was mostly by squad volleys, then rapid fire, all at unknown distances. An average of 65 per cent of hits was made. Officers and men deserve great praise for excellent condition of the company.

Company B, Second Battalion, station Phoenix, was inspected May 30th, 1894. Present at inspection, three officers and 26 enlisted men; absent, with leave, seven enlisted men; sick, one enlisted; unaccounted for, two enlisted; total strength of company, 39. Condition of clothing, arms and accoutrements, good; proficiency in the school of the company, in close and open order, military appearance and discipline, excellent. Guard was not mounted by this company, but the members are frequently instructed in guard duty, and have mounted guard a number of times under the personal supervision of the writer. Target practice was not held by this company generally at date of inspection, as the range was being used by teams from B and C Companies for a match shoot the greater portion of the day.

Company C, Second Battalion, station Tempe, was inspected on May 27th. Present at inspection, three officers and 29 enlisted men; absent, on leave, five enlisted; sick, one enlisted; unaccounted for, six enlisted; total strength of company, 44. Condition of clothing, arms and accoutrements, good; military appearance, discipline and proficiency in school of company, in close and extended order, excellent. Frequent instruction is given in guard duty, and while guard was not mounted during the day inspection was made, the inspecting officer has personal knowledge of the proficiency of the company in this important respect. The company went through the extended order drill in the same manner as A Company, and made a percentage of 50 in hits on the B target. Officers and men display great interest in their duties, and as a result the company made a most excellent showing.

Company D, Third Battalion, station Tucson, was inspected on the 8th June. Present at inspection, three officers and 15 enlisted men; absent, with leave, five enlisted; excused, five enlisted; sick, one enlisted; absent, unaccounted for, five enlisted; total strength of company, 34. Condition of clothing, good; condition of arms and accoutrements, unsatisfactory; discipline and military appearance, fair. The inspection of this company took place in the evening in a restricted drill room, and no drill was had except in the manual of arms, that being good. The present company is virtually a reorganization, as the company commander explained to me that up to the time he took command, on the 14th of March, of this year, no drills had been held for six or seven months. Instruction in guard duty, extended order drill and target practice should have attention as soon as possible.

E Company, First Battalion, station Florence, was inspected May 18, 1894. Present at inspection, two officers and 17 enlisted men; absent, with leave, one officer and 17 enlisted (most of these men were temporarily at work near Florence on ranches, in mines, etc., there being no employment for them in town. They could not attend inspection. Their home, however, is in Florence, and they desire to retain their membership in the company, and do attend drill when in town). Condition of clothing, arms and accoutrements, unsatisfactory; discipline and military appearance, unsatisfactory; proficiency in the school of the company, in close order, very fair. No attention has been paid to guard duty, extended order drill, and the target practice has been neglected. From what the inspecting officer could learn of the situation it is next to impossible to maintain an efficient company at this place for the present, and he would deem it to be for the best interest of the service that the present company be mustered out, and reorganized at some other point. There is no strategic value in this station; it is thirty miles from the railroad, and the contingency for use of a company remote. Other places have repeatedly asked for an organization, that are live and nearer communication by rail. It would be well, at least, to consider such a change.

F Company, Third Battalion, station Tucson, was inspected on the 8th June. Present at inspection, two officers, 20 enlisted; absent, with leave, four enlisted; unaccounted for, eight enlisted; total strength of company, 34. Condition of clothing, arms and accoutrements, very good; discipline and military appearance, good; proficiency in manual of arms, good. Inspection was held in the evening in the armory, and very little idea could be obtained of the proficiency of the command in company movements. Some attention has been paid both to guard duty and extended order drill. No target practice had been held up to the time of inspection, during the present target year. The records of the company are well and thoroughly kept, and deserve especial notice.

G Company, Third Battalion, station Nogales, was inspected on the 28th December. Present at inspection, two officers, 50 enlisted; absent from station, with leave, one officer, 15 enlisted; excused, two enlisted; unaccounted for, six enlisted; total strength of company, 76. Condition of clothing and accoutrements, excellent; condition of arms, fair; discipline and military appearance, excellent; proficiency in school of company, in close order, very good. This is the youngest company in the Guard, and for the short time it has been organized it has made rapid strides towards efficiency. At the time of inspection a large percentage of the men who first enlisted were absent from the station, and it is very nearly correct to say that 50 per cent of those present at inspection were very recent recruits. The personnel of the company is most excellent, the members being earnest and enthusiastic, and it will behoove some of the older organizations to look to their laurels when this company has had the benefit of a little more instruction.

H Company, Second Battalion, station Yuma, was inspected on the 6th of May. Present at inspection, two officers, 17 enlisted; absent from station, with leave, 10 enlisted; unaccounted for, nine enlisted; total strength of company, 38. Condition of arms, clothing and accoutrements, very good; discipline and military appearance, excellent; proficiency in school of company, in close order, very good. No instruction in guard duty or extended order drill had been held up to the time of inspection, except a short drill in extended order, conducted by writer at time of inspection, at which some very good target work was done at unknown distances.

NOTE.—The writer again inspected this company on the 15th of December, and found the enlisted strength increased to 53, and the company in most excellent condition. The errors pointed out at the previous inspection were noticeable at the later one by their entire absence.

I Company, First Battalion, station Flagstaff, was inspected on the 2d September. Present at inspection, three officers and 19 enlisted, sick, two enlisted; unaccounted for, 10 enlisted. Condition of clothing and accoutrements, fair; condition of arms, good; discipline and military appearance, good; proficiency in school of company, in close order, very fair. No instruction has been given in guard duty or extended order drill, and very little target practice had been held during the present target year, caused mainly by lack of ammunition.

K Company, First Battalion, station St. Johns, was not inspected, for reasons given.

GENERAL REMARKS AND RECOMMENDATIONS.

The general condition of the Guard is very good; considering the scant encouragement extended to it, it is excellent. The discipline, as evinced by prompt obedience to orders, is excellent. As a rule, officers and men take great interest in their duties. It is believed, from the success attending the companies that have tried it, that it would be best for all companies to do away with the company by-law system. The Guard is a military, not a civil, organization, and the U. S. Army Regulations and General Military Code contain everything necessary for the guidance of the companies in their military duties. Most of the companies have the web belt, campaign hat and canvas leggings. All should be provided with them for field duty. No camp or garrison equipage has been issued, the allowance being too small to warrant it. The Guard are in sore need of overcoats, blankets and haversacks, at least, as a beginning to equip them for active service. The allowance from the general government being too small to permit of the issue, it should be provided by the Territory.

The points in drill that the Guard are deficient in, to wit: guard duty and extended order drill, or, to put it in language that is not technical, fighting tactics, are very difficult to impart, excepting at an encampment, when all the companies are assembled, and sufficient time can be given these most important duties. The principles, it is true, should be acquired before going into camp, and company commanders should look to it that sufficient instruction, as far as possible, is given in these important matters. Every commissioned and non-commissioned officer should provide himself with a Manual of Guard Duty, study and recite it at the company officers' school, and be sufficiently familiar with the principles of guard duty to instruct the men under him. It would be well if one drill in the month should be given over to the mounting of guard by company details, and instruction given in posting and relieving sentinels, and familiarizing the men with the duties of sentries. Non-commissioned officers must be posted in guard duty. It is absolutely necessary. In the event of active service, in nine cases out of ten the first thing the men would be called upon to perform would be guard duty. How many are competent? Let company commanders answer this question for themselves, and act accordingly.

Too little attention is given to squad drill in close and extended order. Under the new regulations non-commissioned officers, especially corporals, play a very important part. To fit themselves for their duties they must acquire the necessary knowledge and the habit of command, else they will be found wanting when needed. Company commanders should be very careful in their selection of non-commissioned officers, and require them to be familiar with their duties. Laxity in this respect on the part of non-commissioned officers should be dealt with summarily. Make them understand that they hold their office and wear the chevrons for a purpose, and when they fall short of accomplishing it they have survived their usefulness.

In the matter of arms, each man should have a rifle assigned him, and he should use that and no other, and be at all times responsible for its condition. Thus, and thus only, can the pieces be kept in proper condition for use. At least five rounds of ball cartridge should at all times be kept in the cartridge boxes for use in emergencies. The web belt is much better suited for use on the target range, and the issue in the boxes should not be used.

More attention should be paid to company records. Letters received and sent should be properly kept, and the company property book should receive careful attention. Retained copies should be always kept of all rolls, returns, etc. This work should be divided among the company officers, leaving the captain's time free for administration. A company commander in the Guard has quite sufficient to attend to to keep him busy without having all his paper work on his hands in addition.

More attention should be paid to saluting, and men should not forget that though they may be on friendly and familiar terms with their officers while off duty, that there are certain outward evidences of respect required of a soldier toward an officer. The laxity in this respect is due more to thoughtlessness than any intention not to perform their duty.

The company officers' school, required in existing orders, is not being held by many companies. It should be held weekly, preferably before the regular drill. It is, properly conducted, productive of much good.

The writer has endeavored in this report to be fair and impartial, and speak unhesitatingly where an abuse or laxity prevails, that it might be corrected for the good of the service, and he trusts that officers and men will appreciate the spirit in which the report has been made, and endeavor to work on in the interests of the Guard with renewed strength and interest, and make the National Guard of Arizona second to none in existence.

For the many courtesies extended to him in the performance of his official duties the writer tenders his sincere thanks to officers and men. The warm welcome he has received at every station has made his tour of inspection a most pleasant duty.

Very Respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

R. ALLYN LEWIS,

Major First Infantry N. G. A.,

Acting Inspector General.

NOTE.—The Headquarters of the Second Battalion were inspected by the Adjutant General and found in perfect running order.

—OF THE—

Inspector of Small Arms Practice

FOR THE YEAR ENDING 1894.

NATIONAL GUARD OF ARIZONA,
OFFICE OF INSPECTOR OF SMALL ARMS PRACTICE,
PHOENIX, ARIZONA, December 10, 1894. }

Colonel Ed Schwartz,

Adjutant General N. G. A.

SIR:

I have the honor to herewith submit my annual report of the Department of Small Arms Practice.

Hereto annexed find in tabulated form the report of target firing of the National Guard of Arizona.

The report of the First Regiment (which, with the exception of the General Staff, is the whole of the Guard) shows an average of 39.65 points, an increase of 38½ per cent over 1893.

Of the total number reported enrolled on the 15th of October, 118, or 30 per cent, have not appeared upon the range for practice, and are classified in the Third Class. About 23 per cent are in Class 2; that is, have had instruction in shooting, and have appeared on the range, but have not qualified in a higher class, while 47 per cent have qualified as First Class men, or higher, and about six per cent have qualified as Sharpshooters, having shot at 100, 200, 300, 500, 600, 800 and 1000 yards, and a skirmish run, and have made 80 per cent of the possible.

This is a very gratifying result of the year's work, especially in the higher classes, having qualified 23 Sharpshooters and 13 Marksmen, as against 4 Sharpshooters and 3 Marksmen in 1893.

The past year has witnessed a great increase in interest in target work by most of the companies, and special mention should be made of the work of Companies C and K. In the former every member of the company have qualified as First Class or higher, and all but four as Riflemen or higher; while the latter has only four men not qualified as First Class or higher.

The highest individual score was 203 out of a possible 225, and was made by both Captain W. E. Mullen, of C Company, and First Sergeant F. W. Nelson, of K Company. Under the rules deciding ties Captain Mullen is placed first and wins the special medal.

The Regimental average has been considerably lowered by the fact that E Company has had no practice whatever this year, and that all of the practice of the F. S. and N. C. S. was done entirely by two of the officers, the balance not practicing.

During the year there have been four competitive team shoots, shot under the conditions and for the special medals as set forth in Par. II. S. O. No. 2, Series 1893, A. G. O.

The teams consisted of six men from each company, each individual firing ten shots at 200 and at 500 yards.

The first was between teams from Companies B and C, on December 25th at Phoenix. Scores: B Company, 425; C Company, 377.

The second between teams from the same companies on May 30th at Phoenix. Scores: B Company, 408; C. Company, 344.

The third between teams from Companies I and K. This was shot at Winslow. Scores: K Company, 400; I Company, 323.

The fourth was between teams from B and C Companies, at Tempe. Scores: C Company, 443; B Company, 441.

Medals have been issued to members of the winning teams from this office at my private expense.

The regulations governing target practice prescribe certain inexpensive and appropriate decorations for the successful soldier in target practice. As target practice in the National Guard, unlike that of the regular army, is mainly voluntary, it is absolutely necessary to give some encouragement. "Even the most generous and patriotic of men are encouraged when they see the result of their unselfish efforts marked in some distinctive way. It is proof to themselves, if nothing else, that they are making progress." But knowing that from the first shot he fires he is working for honors, which begin to come with completing moderately fair records at the minor ranges, with additional honors and medals as he increases his efficiency, his interest is aroused and competition is started, and soon the result is seen in the increased proficiency of the individual as a marksman and a soldier.

Since these medals were adopted we have had the spectacle of the Territory awarding to the successful marksman these decorations and then compelling them to pay for the same before he can get them.

"Shooting to hit is the objective point of the military art. All other studies and drills are for the purpose of placing the soldier in a position to do this effectually." To learn to shoot, target practice is necessary.

To encourage this practice it is necessary to give these medals. Since it is to the interest of the Territory to make good soldiers it is only just and proper that the Territory should do what it can to help out the volunteer service of her militiamen.

I would therefore recommend that the next Territorial Legislature be asked to appropriate for this purpose a small amount annually.

Circumstances of distance between posts, and an entire absence of public funds for the purpose has prevented a personal inspection of the work of the various companies, with the exception of Companies B and C.

As Company E has had no target practice for two years, and seems to have lost all interest in its duties, I would recommend its disbandment.

The following is a list, in order of merit, of those qualifying as Sharpshooters this year:

REPORT

—OF THE—

Surgeon General of the Territory of Arizona

FOR THE YEAR ENDING 1894.

TERRITORY OF ARIZONA,
OFFICE OF THE SURGEON GENERAL,
PHOENIX, ARIZONA, December 28, 1894. }

Colonel Ed Schwartz,

Adjutant General N. G. A.

SIR:

I desire to make the following annual report:

During the year the first Hospital Corps of the National Guard of Arizona has been organized. Its organization has been, and still is, attended by much difficulty, as no supplies were attainable through military channels, and all expenses have been borne by me personally. I expect soon to have the corps on a sound and working basis. The instruction is in the litter drill and first aid to the wounded.

The action now being taken by the Committee of Organization of the International Congress of Military Surgeons, to bring about a union of the Red Cross Society of the world, will be of vast benefit to the Hospital Corps work as conducted throughout the civilized world. It is hoped by the members of this committee that this will soon be accomplished. I have the honor to be a member of this committee of five, and am assigned to Great Britain. Much work has already been accomplished in this direction, with the end in view of the elevation of the character of the Hospital Corps service of the National Guard of the United States.

I have the honor to be

Very Respectfully,

SCOTT HELM,

Surgeon General N. G. A.
